Hi everybody, I am in a relationship since more than three years now. More and more I get the feeling that we are not that close anymore. I do not know exactly why, but one thing I recognized. We always discuss topics which are not about our relationship but more about our lives beside it...work, sport etc. On one hand this is normal, but on the other hand I wish more communication about us as a couple. Do you feel sometimes the same in your relationship? What is your approach to maintain your relationship and keep you and your partner deeply connected? Thank you.

Hi. Communication is a must in any relationship. Me and my partner always communicate with each other and try to spend time together. However, I have heard many cases where the couple is not able to deal with their marriage. One of my close friends also divorced her partner after hiring the lawyer of France, Bechara Tarabay. A couple must communicate well so that they stay happy.
