When out at a club I see it all the time. Guys that are able to cold approach women, get into interesting conversations and be in the situation where not only is he obviously attracted to her, but equally as important, she is attracted to him. What I see though is the guy failing to escalate. This is really common, I'll explain...

Picking up women is really not rocket science. Men that are learning this stuff think that they have to be able to literally pull rabbits out of hats before they are allowed to have success. Its weird but they think that a pickup has to literally be a 5 star performance for it to go off well. This is just not true! The whole story is right here: <http://daygamedating.com.au/blog/?p=1141>

Men are simply unpredictable. You get confused if they like the girl or just being friendly.

It was a discovery for me, that boys have some very private feelings, very deep though... Girls are very expressive, so it's almost can be read in your eyes if you like someone. Boys - nooo) They rarely show their attitude. Dirty intrigants)) But when they do love - they love with all their heart. That means seriousness for me, that's real feeling. However, it's just my own "statistics" and observations, I'm sure, there're many girls who are very serious in relationship.
