Absolutely agree. And how about your internal "dress"? I mean self-confidence, your intension and your trust in success?

Yes the internal dressing is also very important. One should be honest with himself. And as it is said confidence is a key to get success this also follows in the field of dating. After this a person's talk, the way of communication, mentality, behavior also matters when he goes on a date.

A first date means you'll want to be making a fantastic impression. Choosing clothes that make you feel at your best, confident, happy and comfortable is the first thing to keep in mind. Please keep in mind few things

1. Avoid over-dressing or under-dressing for the occasion.
2. Wear a color that suits rather than your favorite color.
3. Use a modest amount of perfume.
4. Wear what works, not what the latest catwalk model is dancing around in.
5. Wear your hair as much as possible in the way you usually do.

These are the some thing every one should keep in mind

When it comes to clothing then a suit and flowers in hand will suffice. Just kidding. Dressed properly means to be clean and to have clothes that fits your body.

What if he or she is weird? What if we run out of things to talk about? What should I order? What shouldn't I order?

Since you can't prepare for most of those scenarios ahead of time, try to stop thinking about all of the things that could go wrong. Trust me, it's not worth the energy. Just try to dress good on the date and feel yourself confident:

1. Wearing Something Out Of Your Hamper
2. Stressing Out Too Much
3. Overly Ambitious Style Choices

That's it.
