Marriage is truly an amazing thing. People used to consider it as a paper that gives an excess tax. All the same, the more I was thinking, the more I have discovered what marriage could be. A lot of people don't believe in marriage. But it's not marriage's fault. It's the fault of the couples. People promise to love the partner in 5, 10, 15 years. And this is absurd, because neither you, nor partner will be the same person as you are now. The future full of uncertainty, you know.

If you really decided to tie the knot, then be sure that your partner can frankly reply to these questions: <http://blog.livedating.me/direct-questions-your-present-or-future-partner-should-be-capable-to-response/>

Yes, guys, marriage is a decision, the decision that we make only once. And you have to decide whether you are going to be for the rest. Because the pleasant times are a box of chocolate. But life is not a box of chocolate. But if you determined you're going to live with this person then you don't permit any drama or outside force to destroy that decision.
