

---

Subject: Childfree family

Posted by Brick11Molain on Tue, 29 Dec 2015 14:30:35 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

We live together for 2 years. From time to time he gives me hints that he wants kids. But as only I start talking about this I feel this tense in his eyes and his voice and the only thing I hear is that critical comments that he actually doesn't want to have children. Never.

But what I have to do? To wait while he is growing up? Because of this I forgot about the private life. I understand that something is going wrong, but I love him and want to share my life with him and want to become a mother one day. It's so complicated.

---

---

Subject: Re: Childfree family

Posted by LeePalm44 on Wed, 30 Dec 2015 09:07:18 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Have you ever felt the strong desire not to have kids? Or, if your dream was to have a brood, how would it feel to abandon it now? Are you comfortable making this choice or is it fraught with anxiety and confusion? Try not to be in the moment with this. Think beyond the wedding and honeymoon. When your friends are growing their families, how will you feel? Happy for them, but happier you made this choice? Envious of those pregnant bellies? Relieved you dodged the bullet of raising a family?

---

---

Subject: Re: Childfree family

Posted by NickLox1 on Wed, 30 Dec 2015 09:10:28 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Brick11Molain wrote on Tue, 29 December 2015 16:30But what I have to do?

If you're seeking advice on this from everyone you know, know that the act of relentless questioning is giving you a signal. Why? Because you're conflicted. And you're looking for the magic words that will make this right for you. Your partner isn't asking the woman next to him on the subway whether he should have kids. He doesn't need to. He's resolute in his decision. And so should you be. Yes, ask questions, but ask them of yourself.

---

---

Subject: Re: Childfree family

Posted by Relationup on Wed, 30 Dec 2015 16:56:10 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

It sounds like he's not really sure what he wants either. Depending on how young you both are, he might not be ready to really think about this seriously and honestly. It's important to be honest with him and let him know what you want, but also try not to pressure him into stating what he wants now. Even discussing the possibility is a good first step. Helping him understand that this isn't something you want tomorrow, but in the future will also help him not find the conversation threatening or a sort of ultimatum.

---

---

---

Subject: Re: Childfree family

Posted by breakupshop on Wed, 29 Apr 2020 01:39:12 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Has he explicitly stated we wants kids? When you say he hints from time to time, what are those hints?

---